

Grooving Around the Peninsula

with BETTY MANN

Hi There Fellow Peninsulans;

In the following weeks, I will focus attention on a subject that will hopefully bring about a better understanding of the black ethnic language that exists within the realms of the black culture. A communicative course, which was attended by persons from many cultures, was held recently in Carmel. This informative course was received so enthusiastically by these persons that it was felt that perhaps more people might be informed and enlightened by a better insight of the black dialect, which is spoken by all blacks from the uneducated to the scholarly. Perhaps some of you outside of the culture have commented on the language and enunciation that most blacks tend to use. Perhaps you have noticed and heard these slangs that most blacks use such as: "dig this, baby"; "right on"; "rapping"; "shuck-ing"; "jiving"; "running it down to ya"; "copping a plea" and "signifying." Many of these are part of the recognized black ghetto idiom and describe different kinds of talking. Each has its own distinguishing features of form, style and function; each is influenced by and influences the speakers, setting, and audience. Each sheds light on the black perspective and the black condition—on those orienting values and attitudes that will cause a speaker to speak or perform.

The first topic will be "The Language of Black Children: Instructional Implications."

It was written by Kenneth B. Johnson, Assistant Professor of Education at the University of Illinois at Chicago Circle.

"When the black man first landed on American shores, he was denied the opportunity to fully assimilate into the mainstream of American life. Whites and blacks were denied the opportunity to have emotional, social or cultural interaction. Largely because he was not allowed to fully participate in the American cultural experience, unique cultural components emerged in the Afro-American's milieu. Most Afro-American cultural elements differ only in degree from the dominant middle-class white culture. However, where unique black cultural traits exist, they conflict with dominant cultural patterns. Since dominant cultural traits in a society are more highly valued than sub-cultural components, minority groups are disadvantaged when they possess cultural elements which conflict with those of the larger society.

"The language spoken by some black people conflicts with the dominant language in our society. The black man's unique sub-cultural pattern of speech often interferes with his academic achievement, social mobility and vocational success. Since one of the expressed goals of the public school is to enhance youngsters' social mobility and vocational success, it has a major responsibility to help black children develop proficiency in standard English. The public school has largely failed in its attempts to help black youngsters attain proficiency in standard English. This paper will focus on some of the reasons why black children are not developing the needed proficiency in standard English and suggest an alternative instructional program designed to help them become more adept in the dominant language.

"Standard English, or the language of the middle-class, has been defined as ...the kind of English habitually used by most educated English-speaking persons in the United States. Thus, 'He doesn't want any' would qualify as a sample of standard English—not because some 'authority' has certified it as being 'correct' but because evidence suggests that educated speakers habitually say 'He doesn't want any' in situations where less-educated speakers might say 'He don't want none'. Fries, the noted Linguist, has stated that standard English is the variety of English '... used to carry on the important affairs of our country.' It is difficult to give an operational definition of standard English. It must be defined normatively. It is usually not difficult, however, to determine what is not standard English; the variety of English most often heard in the disadvantaged black subculture is not standard English but a non-standard dialect of English.

A dialect is the collective speech patterns of one sub-cultural group as opposed to those of any other subcultural group. A non-standard dialect is the collective speech patterns of a subcultural group that does not have the prestige of the collective speech patterns (standard English) of the dominant cultural group (the middle-class). The variety of English spoken by many disadvantaged black people is called by some linguists the 'non-standard Negro dialect.'

Children begin to learn language long before they enter school and, by the time they enter school, they have internalized the features of the particular variety of English spoken in their primary cultural environment. Children born into a middle-class culture learn the language of the middle-class; children born into a disadvantaged black subculture learn their culture's dialect. This is not the language pattern that often leads to academic, social, and vocational success.

AAUW Hear About Black Contributions

The second in the current series of studies, based on the topic, "Academic Community: New Look on Campus," was presented by Mrs. Henry Hutchins, instructor in Ethnic Studies at Monterey Peninsula College and a member of the Monterey Peninsula Branch of the American Association of University Women, on the contributions which Afro-Americans are making in the area of literature.

The program was given in the Humanities Lounge at the College on Wednesday, March 10.

Mrs. Hutchins touched upon the work of Dunbar, DuBois, Wright and others, in her discussion.

In keeping with the topic, following the discussion, a "Soul Food" luncheon was served under the direction of Mrs. B. J. Moises, Miss Gertrude Rendell, Mrs. Richard Peterson, Mrs. Horace Onorato and the Chairman, Mrs. Raymond McCaig.

The third and final lecture on the series given by Mrs. Hutchins, will be presented in April on the subject: "The Plight of the Black American."

"It will be devoted to music, poetry, pantomime, interpretive dancing and drama, done by the students at the College."

Mini-Guides Are NOW in Spanish

The State Department of Human Resources Development now provides a series of job-descriptive leaflets in Spanish, called "mini-guides" for Spanish-speaking job-seekers with limited reading skills, according to HRD Deputy Director Norman Blacher, who heads the Department's jobs division.

Each "mini-guide" is a single sheet of paper, folded to make a small, four-page pamphlet. Simple drawings and sketches supplement the text to provide essential job market information on a variety of occupations.

"These booklets tell what a Spanish-speaking person needs to know about an occupation," said Blacher. "They describe the education or training needed, the duties, the working conditions, the wages paid. And they are up-to-date; we revise them every six months."

"Mini-guides" in English have been available for several years through HRD as a supplement to the 400 regular California Occupational Guides.

"We are steadily translating booklets of this type for use in HRD offices that serve the Spanish-speaking community," Blacher added. So far, 45 are available, he said.

Among the titles available are "Dactilografas" (Clerk-Typist), "Bombero Forestal"

(Forest Firefighter), "Podador de Arboles" (Tree Trimmer) and "Monitor de Juegos y Deportes" (Playground Recreation Aide). Copies of the "mini-guides" and Occupational Guides may be obtained without charge from the nearest HRD office or State Service Center. They are also available to schools and community action groups.

'Messiah' Is Palm Sunday Scheduled For

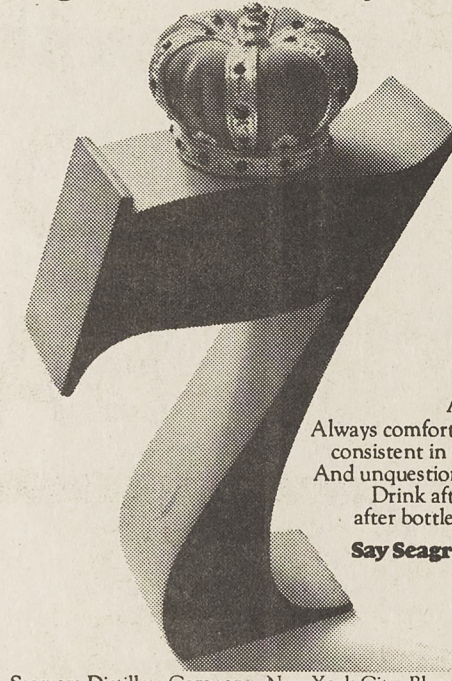

Peninsula audiences will once again enjoy the annual Palm Sunday performance of George Frederick Handel's renowned oratorio, "Messiah," Sunday, April 4, at the Naval Postgraduate School. The single performance will be in King Hall at 3 p. m.

This is the fifth year that the Protestant Women of the Chapel at NPS have sponsored the religious masterpiece.

The Monterey Peninsula Choral Society will join the Monterey County Symphony Chamber Orchestra under the direction of Haymo Taeuber for the performance.

Tickets are on sale at Abinante Music Store, 425 Alvarado Street and McConnell's Book Store, 165 Webster Street, Monterey. They will also be available at the NPS Protestant Chapel's Office (646-2241) or at the box office in King Hall the day of the performance.

geles quake reports that very few people carried insurance against quakes. I was always under the impression that most homeowners policies covered earthquakes, but it seems that they don't. I looked into the insurance matter and found out that you can get earthquake insurance added to your policy for what I thought was a very nominal sum. One company quoted $1.60 per thousand dollar of coverage with a $1300 deductible clause. But even at that, if you had considerable damage, it sure would save you from having to pay for your house twice.

Let's hope that these scientist fellows can come up with some reliable information about how to predict earthquakes. Even though the destruction would still come, at least the terror of uncertainty would be removed. It makes you realize the insignificance of man with his daily travail when you contemplate the forces of nature at work.

From weather to earthquakes to gas stations is quite a jump for any editorial columnist to take. However, we get all our ideas for columns from the daily happenings around us and the news from the automobile capital, Detroit, is that the planning commission and city council have taken action to halt the construction of any more gas stations there. This action was not an act against business, but a positive step towards stopping the desecration of our cities.

Seaside has more than its supply gas stations. The worst example I can think of is the intersection of Del Rey Oaks Boulevard and the freeway, where already a Gulf and an Arco station have changed hands three or four times and are constantly on the verge of going broke. Now they are putting a Shell station on the other corner and a Standard station is planned across the street. Another example is on the corner of Del Rey Oaks and Fremont where there already was a Shell station one block away. The Shell company and some greedy land speculators put up another Shell station on that corner. True it is a good looking station, but who needed another Shell station. I understand that the same Shell company was denied a permit on that same corner just a year or so before the land changed hands and after the changeover in ownership of the corner the city fathers didn't think that a gas station was so bad on that corner. However, that's another story.

Service stations have a necessary function, but neither that function nor the community is served by their mindless competition or their ugliness. Maybe the way to stop them if the city councils won't, is to take away the tax privileges that the oil companies have which allows them to build gas stations on every corner with our tax dollars.

Many black children never learn the language of the middle-class, the language needed for success, in school. Teachers have generally blamed the children for not learning the middle-class language. Perhaps the blame should be placed on the methods and materials used to teach disadvantaged black children this language and on teacher attitudes towards the dialect of disadvantaged black children.

Navy Boats Christened

The acceptance and christening of two new Shields class sloops for the Naval Postgraduate School was held at the Monterey Peninsula Yacht Club, March 14.

The vessels were purchased by the Naval Postgraduate School Foundation with funds donated by Cornelius Shields of New York and were accepted for the Postgraduate School by Rear Admiral Robert W. McNitt, superintendent.

The sloop "Barbara" was christened by Mrs. Barbara McNitt and is named for her and the granddaughter of the donor.

The sloop "Yankee" was christened by Mrs. Robert Allan of Pebble Beach, wife of the president of the Naval Postgraduate School Foundation.

YAFA Column

Working closely with Lee Toler was a young man name Trevor Laing (Trevor is still with the organization in the capacity of Assistant Director). Together, Lee and Trevor travelled all over the Peninsula explaining the economic problems to the Merchants and businessmen and were successful in getting jobs for the young students. They would work part time in the evenings and on weekends. This was fine for the youngsters because it provided them with a sense of responsibility and independence.

With many of the students being the product of low income families or from families wholly dependent upon the welfare, this added source of income was welcomed. The parents became appreciative of the efforts of Lee and Trevor and praised the Young Adults For Action.

Conversely there were those who accused Lee of using the youngsters for any number of illegal and/or unlawful activities. However, Lee would not allow these discouraging comments to affect him for he knew that something needed to be done in this community and he recognized the lack of concern by those who were in position. So he took it upon himself to get something going constructive for the youngsters of Seaside.

Lee possessed within him the drive to try to make Seaside a decent place to raise his children. He often said "It's hell to have come out of a ghetto, but it is worse to see one being formed around you." With this attitude Lee continued on his way to bring about a change.

While there were those adversely criticizing YAFA, there were others watching him. These others were intelligent enough to see that YAFA could be an important factor in helping a certain element of society throughout entire Peninsula. This group of men agreed to give Lee financial backing for a period of 90 days. Lee was to take a leave of absence from his job with the school district so he would be able to devote full time to his community action activities.

These benefactors opened up a little office for YAFA on Broadway. There were some people in the community who believed in YAFA's endeavors. People like Johnnie Franklin donated desks and file cabinets. People like Steve Ross donated supplies. However, Lee has testified time and time again that when things got rough and discouraging, his inspiration and motivation was supplied by Mrs. Helen Rucker.

Lee Toler had only a three months guarantee of backing. However, because of his sincere dedication and a true feeling for what he was doing, he quit his job with the school district rather than request a leave of absence. People called him crazy, but when dedication to a cause was involved, Lee knew he could not be happy or satisfied anywhere else. This all was in 1965.

On April 27, 1966, through the assistance of his benefactors, Young Adults For Action was incorporated as a non profit, tax exempt organization.

From the very beginning of the idea that originated in the mind of Lee Toler, economics was decided as being the problem, but as Lee and Trevor sought employment opportunities to solve this problem, it came to light that the organization should now direct its attention to the real problem "crime in the streets". This conclusion was reached by records maintained by office manager Arthur Houston, who came aboard because of his interest in helping the youth, plus his qualification to gather data.

Led by these three men Young Adults For Action launched a full scale war on the economic problem by fighting crime in the streets. They used crime prevention as the hub of the operation and they spoke of assistance were: education; recreation; employment; rehabilitation and general services.

These supporting spokes were primary dreams of Lee Toler. He knew that it would take money and an expanded staff to bring these projects into reality.

Bob Wood Reports

We've all heard about welfare costs, welfare abuses and so on in the news media recently.

I would like to add just a couple of points that our mail shows. Most people would agree with First, the elderly or the aged, the blind and physically disabled never should have been classified under the heading of welfare recipients to begin with. Maybe we could use a new term such as medic-aid for these people. The Governor's new program would shift county costs under the above categories from the county to the state; maybe this would be a good time to change the name classification as well.

Second, the majority of people agree that if a person is physically able to work and they refuse to take a job when a job is available then he or she should be denied further welfare assistance. I think we will all agree there is a lot of work that needs to be done that would not compete with regular jobs, such as school crossing guards.

People could be used on roadside clean-ups. We need better state park facilities with more trails and labor to repair the old ones. There are many unemployed youths that could build fire trails and carry out thousands of valuable land and water resources conservation projects.

The third category most people complain about is the fact that under our present system a non-working mother of three who today can legally draw $221 per month plus medical benefits amounting to $1127 per year could under the present system obtain a job which pays $1000 per month and still continue to be eligible for $223 additional from welfare, $12 a month more than she is allowed when she is not working at all.

This peculiar situation has been brought about principally because of the many federal laws which will allow all sort of deductions from a person's normal salary. If these inequities can be corrected it will not only save the taxpayers millions of dollars, but it will allow more for the truly needy and there are still many in this category. I think most of us will agree that $221 per month for a family of four is certainly not adequate in these times, in fact, it has been shown in the city of San Francisco it takes at least $338 for a family of four to exist.

Who Cares

By Mel Vercoe

Chastity belts first came back into the news a year or two ago when tax authorities in England or some similar out-of-the-way place discovered that some belts which were being sold as novelty items, were actually being used and should be taxed as such. This of course was the worst thing they could have done because everyone wanted two or three of them around the house to prove they are taxpayers.

The Art Hoppe of the San Francisco Chronicle wrote a nice article about them, pointing out, as I recall, the advantages of equipping them with coin operated padlocks, etcetera.

All this reminds me of one I heard on the radio about the Roman gladiator leaving town to go to war and giving the spare key to his wife's chastity belt to his best and most trusted friend in case he didn't come back. Anyway, just as he was passing the city limits sign, his friend caught up with him in a big cloud of dust and said, "Hey, you gave me the wrong key."

So now we get back to our theme - population control. Dr. June Sklar, a University of California demographer, described for some reason as a population expert, made a speech recently in Berkeley in which she said the soaring birth rate could be curbed by requiring couples to pass a financial solvency test before being granted a marriage license.

Since she is an expert on such matters we must assume the following: (1) She is aware that having children involves two people - she used the word "couple". (2) As a demographer she must know that not all people are rich, thus eliminating by her suggested test all people in lower or on income brackets, including welfare recipients, from having children-a proposal which should get her lifetime tenure as a state employee as long as Ronnie is governor. (3) She must have read somewhere in a book that people get married before they have children. (4) She must not be aware that several hundred thousand illegitimate children are receiving welfare just in the state of California and that does not include thousands not on welfare. So something must be happening that was not fully explained in her textbook.

Other bad things besides cheap marriage licenses causing too many children are too many married women working in low-income jobs, low interest rates and low down payments and low rents for housing, easy divorce and remarriage and people telling young folks that marriage is a good thing, according to Dr. Sklar. She did admit that proper changes might encourage illegitimacy, which could then be taken care of by abortions, but this she must have said in a light moment, because Governor Ronald is dead set against abortions.

So be of good cheer. The world's greatest immediate threat, extinction of our species by overpopulation, should not be of concern, because we have "experts" like Dr. Sklar on the state payroll who will save us from peril.

Ruins of Wolf House Are Interesting Trip By Car

The ruins of Wolf House stand on a knoll overlooking the lush valley of the Moon, 50 miles north of San Francisco. The ruins are all that remain of the dream mansion of one of America's most widely read and renowned authors -- Jack London.

The ruins of the house, a massive shell of stones, rocks and boulders are located in Jack London State Historic Park near Glen Ellen, reports the California State Automobile Association.

It is a memorial to a man who lived life like an exploding firecracker. For Jack London -- adventurer, war correspondent, world traveler -- was a man who savored life and believed in living it to the fullest.

Wolf House is a short hike from the main entrance to the park along a trail that winds down a wooded hillside to a grassy opening. Here, to the left of the main trail, is a path leading up to a small hill covered with oak and madrone. Near the top, inside a small weathered picket fence enclosure, is a huge rock once destined to be used in the construction of Wolf House, but rejected because of its size.

Jack London's ashes were placed under the rock shortly after his death on November 22, 1916.

Back down the hill to the main trail and further down the road is a grove of redwood trees that were only sprouts when Wolf House was being built.

London reportedly sunk from $64,000 to $81,000 (figures vary) into Wolf House. The structure had a total of 26 rooms, 9 fireplaces, a reflecting pool, a courtyard and a fireproof manuscript vault. On the night of August 22, 1913, a few weeks before the Londons were to move in, fire destroyed the mansion, "The House of Happy Walls" built by London's wife, Charmain in 1913, is a short distance up the path from the parking lot at the park's entrance.

It is a museum, containing many of London's personal effects -- his writing tools, an old dictaphone, his desk, bed, rejection slips from publishers, manuscripts and artwork used to illustrate many of his stories. Furniture in the House of Happy Walls was to have been used in Wolf House.

London and his wife cruised the South Seas for 27 months on their yacht Snark and mementoes of that cruise are found in the main room downstairs. Visitors are also allowed to view upstairs.

The trail to Wolf House passes of wagon display of vehicles and harnesses used in London's day. One rig, pulled by four horses, was used by London in 1911 when he toured some 1,500 miles to gather material for travel articles.

Wester VW Registration to Send Youth Increases To Germany

A student from one of the Monterey Peninsula's high schools will spend six weeks in West Germany this summer as a "Young Ambassador" in Volkswagen's tenth annual Youth Exchange Program. The announcement was made recently by Jim and Don Wester, owners of Wester Volkswagen at 4 Geary Plaza, the sponsoring dealers.

The participating schools are Seaside, Monterey, Carmel and Pacific Grove High Schools.

The local student will exchange homes, families and friends with a German teenager so they both can learn first hand about the people, customs and views of another nation, the Westers reported.

"The Peninsula student's family is also a 'winner' in this program because they are able to host a German teenager for the summer," they added. "This program underscores Volkswagen's belief that all forms of international exchange build a stronger world," the Westers concluded.

The local winner will be selected on the basis of scholastic standing, personality, extracurricular activities and adaptability to change. The German student will be selected from one of the Volkswagen factory cities.

The Volkswagen Youth Exchange Program was started in 1962 by Volkswagen's late director, Dr. Heinz Nordhoff,

Registration Increases

California vehicle registrations increased by almost one half million during 1970, Department of Motor Vehicles figures show.

DMV Director Robert C. Cozens said vehicles registered in the State on December 31, 1970, totaled 13,813,859 -- an increase of 495,918 over 1969.

Nevertheless, the 3.72 percent growth in vehicle population reflects a relatively poor year in the automobile industry, and compares with increases of 5.16 percent in 1969 and 6.3 percent in 1968.

Motorcycle registrations continued to soar, hitting a total of 561,621 -- a one-year increase of 92,188 or 19.6 percent.

No less than 200,000 motorcycles have been put on the roads of California in just three years.

Fee-paid passenger automobile registrations hit 10,004,155 -- up about 222,000 over the prior year. There were also 1,758,885 trucks and 1,299,716 trailers. Tax-exempt (state, county, city, etc.) vehicles totaled 194,692.

with two students from each nation. The program has grown each year and now over 500 American and German youths have become "Young Ambassadors."

The authorized Volkswagen dealers in northern California have sponsored over 100 of the exchanges including Sharon Stuart of Carmel in 1966.

Registration Changes Are Being Tried

Beginning March 1, most motorcycles registered in California for the first time are being issued two license plate stickers--one for the year 1972 and one for the month of registration. The owner will be expected to pay renewal fees on time during the anniversary month in 1972 and each year thereafter.

Department of Motor Vehicles Director Robert Cozens said a system of round-the-calendar registration renewals is being tried on motorcycles. If it works well, the State Legislature might extend the system to all California vehicles, ending the annual rush to beat the traditional February renewal deadline.

A Vehicle Code change made in 1970 authorized the DMV to initiate such a staggered registration system for motorcycles, Cozens said. "It is a cautious approach to a question hotly debated by registration officials; will the system replace one annual deadline with twelve monthly panics?"

Owners of motorcycles subject to the new system will be mailed a renewal notice about 30 days before next year's individual registration deadline and annually thereafter. The law allows them 30 days past the due date to renew without penalty.

The deadline is exactly one year and one day after the vehicle was first registered and or used in California.

None of the 560,000 motorcycles and those whose owners turn in an out-of-state license plate for a California plate will be enrolled under the staggered registration system.

Based on existing registration trends, close to 100,000

motorcycles should be in the two-sticker category within a year.

A new type of motorcycle license plate is being issued by DMV. It bears two sticker indentations--one for the year and one for the month of renewal.

ELIZABETHAN

A famous battered brass plate with Elizabethan lettering is in the Bancroft Library at UC-Berkeley. The plate is verified as the one left by Sir Francis Drake and his crew in 1579 north of San Francisco.
